DOMESTIC CONSUMERS ADVISED TO SECURE THEIR FUEL NOW

Shortage in Production Must Be Made Up In Coming Months

BIG ORDERS TO GET PREFERENCE

The National Coal Association is earnestly urging domestic consumers to order t heir winter supply of coal during the July and August, giving as reasons therefore the fact that production is even now away below the absolute requirements of the country.

The association sets forth the statement that the requirements of the country for the year 1919 were 530,000,000 tons; at the beginning of the year thestocks on hand amounted to 30,000,000 tons, leaving it necessary to produce 500,000,000 tons during the present year. So far the mines have produced 195,000,000 tons, or at the rate of 8,125,000 tons per week. If the mines are to reach the amount necessary for requirements it will mean thatt he weekly production must reach 10,900,000, or an increase of 2,775,000 tons each week from now until the close of the year.

Unless thedomestic consumer is a little forehanded and lays in his supply during the coming months of summer, he may find it a little difficult later in theseason when tne big industries become such vital factors on the market. It is predicted that a big coal shortage iscoming annd one of the factors which is tending to produce this situation s the faot that thousands of men who formerly worked in the mines have gone back to Europe, and the chances are they will remain there. Consequently many mines when they wish to respond to increased demands will have difficulty in securing the required amount of labor. The larger orders will in all probability begiven the preference and the smaller d ealers will have some difficulty in securinng enough to satisfy their needs.

This is why the association asks the domestic t rade to put in their orders now, thatthe households may be cared for during thesummer, and then, when therush comes, as it will, they will not be clamoring for coal.

Sunnday the program will be slightly changed. Therewill be no athletics and games in the morning. In the afternoon the Dixie Duo and Miss Isabel Byrne, a Red Cross nurse, will furnish the features. A Mysterious Murder Is Brought To Light

Donora police and county officials are making an investigation of what is supposed to be a murder which is shrouded in mystery, and which came to light Friday morning. At that time the badly decomposed body of a man was found by Elmer Woodfill near the Jewish cemetery in the Horseshoe district, about midway between Charleroi and Donora. Deputy Coroner Rabe of Donora was notified, who took the body to his morgue and prepared it for burial.

An examination of the body convinced the officials that theman had been murdered. A bullet wound was found in the rear of the left arm which had taken a downward course and penetrated the heart, a shot through the right temple and his throat severed from ear to ear. There was no mark of identification on the body. He was a man about 5 feet 2 inches in height, partially bald and with brown hair. He wore a light shirt with black stripes and dark trousers, and had on a pair of No. 7 shoes. The man had been ruptured and wore a new truss. He was evidently an American, but there was nothing amout the body to indicate who he was or where he came from. The sum of $1.03 was found on his person.

It seems to be the opinion that the man had been murdered elsewhere and taken to that lonely spot, where the body had been thrown into the weeds Donora officials are of the opinion that the man belongs to some of the surrounding towns and request that any one who know of any disappearance to communicate with them at o nce.

THE WATERWAYS.

The importance of acanal between the Ohio river and the Great Lakes is emphasized in a telegram sent out from Detroit in which it is stated that the Michigan city is to be the northern terminus of a $100,000,000 waterway transportation system and a jupnction point between the two greatest raw material fields in the world if the Government adopts the locking and damming project of the Great Lakes & Ohio River Waterways Association.

The plan, which provides for a 10-foot channel from West Virginia and Kentucky coal fields, through the Scioto and Sandusky rivers, and the west end of Lake Erie to Detroit, would save that city at least $5,000,000 a year in coal bills through reduction of the cost of transportation.

The promoters of this line from the Ohio to the Great Lakes will endeavor to make the government see that this route is the best and most practical, and that itcould be constructed at much less cost and be more available than any of the other three which have been projected.

The attitude of the promoters of the Great Lakes & Ohio route tends to show how much importance prominent men attach to the project of connecting the Ohio with the lakes, by means of which there would be an interchange of heavy and bulky freight and which would materially cut thecost of transportation. Such a canal will be constructed some day, and it is only natural that residents of this community would prefer the route from Pittsburg to the lakes, by means of which this locality would be developed even to a greater extent than ever before. The Government is beginning to realize the full import of inland waterway transportation and undoubtedly will avail itself of the means which nature has so lavishly provided us with.

ENGLAND'S RACE PROBLEM

Disturbances, several of them amounting to riots, are reported from England, due to race antagonism between the white population and negroes, chiefly British subjects, who have been brought into the country to overcome thelabor shortage caused by the war. This is a new and ought to be an illuminating experience to the English people. Hitherto British contact with the blacks has been only in distant colonies with a few soldier-supported white men in command of the natives, a very different situatin from one wherein whites and blacks are economic rivals in acommon territory and develop friction due to race prejudice. Imagining that no such racial antagonism could be roused among themselves the British have viewed with a superior air and commented critically upon disturbances in the United States. Without a race problem of its own, England has failed to comprehend American lawlessness and slack government machinery.

With a race problem at their very doors the British may now perceive that even under the best ordered government in a highly civilized country a certain amount of popular disturbance due to race antagonism is inevitable. We may deplore such outbreaks and do everything possible to check them, but wherever whites and blacks come into contact in more or less equal numbers and on a more or less equal footing there is bound to be disturbance at intervals. If birds of a feather must flock together to secure harmony, we need not wonder at the cousins of antagonism between distinct varieties of men. Race problems are too real to be lightly waved aside.

YOUNG "MOVIE" ACTRESSES

In a recent public talk in New York, Amelia Bingham, the well known actress ,urged film reform in rather tart language. The reform she sees the most need of is the elimination of the sixteen-year-old blondes and brunettes who pose as great actresses and are starred as such, although their historic ability "consists principally in knowng how to heave ther chests and weep ... ing years after they have smelled an onion." They should be replaced by artists of intelligence, according to Miss Bingham. But intelligence comes only with years and the prime qualification for screen work is youth. There's the difficulty, as the movie managers know only too well. "The movie men," haughtily declared Miss Bingham, "have the insulting impertinence to send me a letter once in a while thinking I'm broke, or down and out and that I want work."

Once in a while, it may be, but probably not very often; for, though she has plenty of intelligence, Amelia Bingham is no spring chicken and the film managers have a very good reason for preferring youth and good looks to even great hisrionic powers. Seasoned actresses of forty and beyond, if they have "kept their figure," can play ingenue roles successfully on the stage, but they can not "get way with it" on the screen. The movie camera throws a glaring light upon every line and wrinkle in the human face, defying the most cunning makeup. Gifted actresses past their youth have appeared on the screen and done the very best work, but they looked many years older than the parts they played and in consequence they were soon replaced by "16-year-old kids" of limited artistic capacity. Above all, the screen demands youth.

THE REFORMING MIND

Brand Whitlock's illuminating account of the conditions in Belgium during the ironheeled occupation of the Germans and of his own memorable activities there revealed him not only as an untiring public servant, a skilled diplomat and a writer of distinction, but also as a man of broad sympathies and unusual vision. That he has long possessed this last quality is shown by an earlier utterance on thesubject of reformers as follows:—

"It is the peculiar and distinguishing feature of the reforming mind that life is presented to it in stark and rigid outline. Your true reformer is blandly unconscious of distinctions; he has no perception of proportions, no knowledge of values; in a word no sense of humor. His world is made up of wholly unrelated antithases. There are no shades or shadows, no graduations, no delicate and subtle relativities. A thing is either white or black, sweet or sour, good or bad. A deed is either moral or immoral, a virtue or a crime. All acts of which he does not himself approve a stop must be put to them at once, and the way to do this is to have a law. Statutes are thus enacted. But because of certain contrarieties in nature, and a certain obstreperous quality in human nature and a general complexity in life as a whole, these legal fulminations are frequently triumphs only in theory and in practice often intensify the very ills they seek to cure."

Reformers of the hour would naturally suppose that they are meant, for the cap fits them perfectly, but the above quotation is taken from a Whitlock article written during the "white slave" hysteria of some years ago though it pictures the cock-sure reformer of all time.

MORE WARS AHEAD

Admiral Sims says that despite the universal repose which seems to have come from the proponents of the League of Nations, one of the greatest needs of this country today is the multiplication of naval war colleges to teach the technique of war.

These are words from high authority and were uttered at the Yale luncheon at New Haven with Mr. Taft, head of the American movement for a League of Nations present.

Practical wisdom beats theoretical wisdom a thousand miles, and Admiral Sims, who has seen the world conflict at close range, from the deck of an American battleship, is more competent to judge of what the United States needs than any man whose mind begins and terminates in the academic aloofness of mere speculatioon.

OUT OF DATE

Readers of advertising pages of magazines are doubtless familiar with the typical publicity display of the correspondence school. It generally contains illustrations and text, and the latter is often embellished with mottoes and catchwords "Get out of the dinner pail class," is one of them. Another is "You can make more money with your collar on."

The picture often shows a rejoicing merchant being greeted by his wife on his return from work, after being appointed superintendent. Or acordial employer shakes hands with an overalled toiler and telis him that he has been made an executive as, a result of taking a technical correspondence course.

But the argument begins to lose force. There are sign painter helpers drawing $6 per day (scale) and draftsmen getting $18 a week. There are executives at $25 a week and wagon drivers at $35.

It begins to look as though a man is penalized for edulating himself.

The visit of prominent officials of the Steel Corporation to the Monongahela valley and their inspection of mining properties as well as transportation facilities, shows they have finally realized the supreme importance of the river as a carrier of bulk freight. For years coal and coke were sent from the Connellsville region—now there is great change under way, and before long the big steel company will be securing all of its fuel supply via the Monongahela.

THE OLD CLOCK HAS ITS FACE WASHED

The recent request of the rivermen that the proper authorities of Monongahela see to it that the face of the big town clock in that city be washed bore fruit for now the mariners navigating the muddy waters of the Monongahela are able to tell the time, when passing that town. The clock tower stands high and conspicuous, and is easily seen from passing boats. Another repair was also made to the clock, in that it again sounds the hours, the bell having been silent since last November, when the weights which operates that part of the mechanism broke from their fastenings into the auditorium below. Fortunately the accident happened at a time when the room was empty, otherwise there would have been some casualties among the children. As it is now the people of the city and the mariners are not only able to see the face of the clock, but are likewise able to hear it sound the hours of the day. Thus our neighbor makes progress.

GREAT SCARCITY OF FARM LABOR

A extraordinary shortage of farm help for the harvests and maintaining the truck gardens of Allegheny county exists at present, according to an announcement made by the Allegheny County Farm Bureau on Wednesday. For a long period there have been no applications for farm work at thecounty farm office. The officials said that there is a standing offer of good wages, as the help is absolutely necessary to harvest crops, with the most urgent requests from truck farmers for immediate help. It is said there will be tremendous loss of grain, fruit and vegetables if farm workers are not secured.

It now appears that there was no actual mutiny among our troops near Archangel, Russia, that a company merely objected to more war "after the war was over," and that later these same men spiritedly fought off an enemy attack outnumbering them seven to one.

FAVOR A SAVINGS AND LOAN PROJECT

At a meeting of the Business Men's Bureau of the Washington Board of Trade held Wednesday afternoon at which thirty merchants were present, the Community Savings and Loan Company was endorsed by them. They authorized the management committee to name a committee on the organization of this new financial institution.

The Community Savings and Loan company proposes to be a bank for the small borrower who can pay the money back n systematic weekly or monthly installments. Stock in the company is to be sold only in and about Washington. The idea was first broached at the county seat early in May, but the resolution on Wednesday was the first formal action taken by Washington business men to put the new scheme into effect.

NEW FEATURE ON ELECTION TICKETS

Among the bills passed by the legislature and which is now with Governor Sproul for action is the Crow bill providing that the non-partisan and partisan tickets be printed on the same primary ballot. At present separate ballots are printed and many persons neglect to vote for non-partisan candidates for the judiciary. The measure provides a way of determining when a candidate for judge at a primary election has received 51 per cent of the vote and is entitled to go on the November ballot unopposed. This percentage is ascertained by dividing the total number of votes cast for all candidates for judge by the number of persons each elector is entitled to vote for and the division of the quotient by twoo. In theprimaries the names for judges are to be arranged alphabetically while in the November election the position on the ballot is determined by the number of votes received in the primary.

Already the hotels of New York are legion, yet the Wall Street Journal says there is immediate need of a hundred more of the first class.

CALIFORNIA SHOOTING BEING INVESTIGATED

Coroner Heffran is making an investigation of a shooting which took place at an early hour Friday morning in California and which resulted later in the death of Zeta Scotch at the McKeesport hospital, where he was taken for treatment. Some mystery surrounds the case, the wife of Scotch saying that he shot himself, while county officers believe the shooting was done by the wife. It is known that Scotch went home early Friday morning in an intoxicated condition and that a quarrel ensued The man was shot four times.

FAREWELL DINNER FOR PROF. AND MRS McCORMICK

Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Manon gave a farewell dinner at their home, Friday evening, to Prof. and Mrs. McCormick, who will leave shortly for their new home in California, where Prof. McCormick goes as principal of the public schools. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Guy Nickeson of Pittsburg.

We are reminded of Thomas Jefferson's wise but rejected dictum that the country is governed best that is governed least by the arrest and jailing for four days of two innocent young women in New York merely because they stopped on the street and spoke briefly with two men, one of whom was an old acquaintance. Better let a hundred soliciting street walkers escape than subject one innocent woman to such outrage.

According to wide report, crime is increasing in all parts of the country, both "dry" and "wet." Reaction from the war strain is suggested as the cause, but it is likely that the causes are many and that one of the most important is the high cost of living.

A former $12-a-week waiter after experience in the army, is now handling men instead of dishes at a salary of $5000 a year. No doubt he has a good opinion of Uncle Sam's war school.

HEARD THE YANKS WHISTLE

In Verdun on Armistice Night It Was the Only Sign of Peace Correspondent Found.

We rolled into Verdun long after dark, on the day of the armistice, and found no celebration there, Williams Stevens McNutt writes in Collier's Weekly. There were no shells falling in the town, but otherwise the martyred city was as we had known it during the war. No lights showed. The narrow streets were filled with the rustling sound of many soldiers passing in the dark, talking in low tones.

And yet there was something strange about Verdun, something different, some change that forced itself upon my attention, and yet one which I could not determine. An American soldier stopped near the car to light a cigarette. He had been whistling "Annie Laurie," and after a long whiff went on whistling. And then I knew what made me feel different in Verdun that night.

Everywhere, all over the city, Americans were whistling! They were whistling casually, unconsciously, one this tune and one that. But they were whistling! One could pick out the Americans in the dark all over the city, because where there was an American one heard the shrilling of some old American tune or newer rag. The French don't whistle casually on the street at any time, and never before had the American generally practiced his habit in Verdun. And that night going about their various tasks in the dark old city, the Americans were whistling.

Hearing that cheery, familiar sound, my mind for the first time really took hold on the end of the great war as an understandable fact.

Sure Cure for Seasickness.

In "An Irishwoman in China" Mrs. De Burgh Daly tells of an amusing incident that she witnessed on the Japanese ship Sendai Maru. A young lady, after long seclusion in her cabin, came on deck and walked about a little. Presently the breeze freshened, the ship began to roll, and she turned pale. To my astonishment, says Mrs. Daly, I saw a Japanese sailor go up to her and slap her violently between the shoulders with his open hand. "Oh," I cried to the captain, who was standing beside me, "what a shame! Why did he do that?" "I'm so sorry," said the captain in a small, meek voice. "I told him to do it. We think it such a good cure for seasickness!" And, says Mrs. Daly, it did cure her, for she was so indignant that she forgot her uneasy feelings, scolded the man roundly and felt much better.

The Perfect Gentleman.

"Even our ideas of honor change," notes a friend who is always arguing that virtue is a mere matter of geography or era. "It is but a century since a Man of Honor—it was an entirely different sort of person from the one to whom that term could be applied today. A Man of Honor—a Real Gentleman—was one who made it a point to pay all his gambling debts and wine bills, even if he had to marry to get the money." But our friend is wrong about honor. The one he mentions was not a man of honor—he was merely called so. The Indians were not natives of India just because Columbus thought they were, though the misnomer stuck to them for all generations.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Be Sure of Your Ground.

Do not talk but of what you know; do not think but of what you have materials to think justly upon; and do not look for things only that you like, when there are others to be seen—this is the lesson to be taught to our youth, and inbred in them; and that mainly by our own example and confidence. Never teach a child anything of which you are not yourself sure; and, above all, if you feel anxious to force anything into its mind in tender years, that the virtue of youth and early association may fasten it there, be sure it is no lie which you thus sanctify.—John Ruskin.

False and True Freedom.

There are two freedoms—the false, where a man is free to do what he likes; and the true, where a man is free to do what he ought.—Canon Kingsley.

By-Products.

By-products are substances or results obtained collaterally or incidentally in the operation of a specific process or manufacture of something else. In hunting game for food the hides and feathers are by-products; in manufacturing lumber sawdust and shavings are by-products; in the manufacture of gas, coke is a by-product, though not the only one evolved in the process.

Raising Foxes on Ranches.

Raising ranch-bred foxes is an industry that is being carried on extensively in all the Canadian provinces, in at least a dozen of the northernmost states of the United States, and beginning in Japan and Norway, all lying in much the same climate belt, adapted to domesticating the black fox, under the most favorable conditions.

"Golden Bell," Famous Irish Relic.

Curio collectors had an opportunity of obtaining a famous Irish relic at auction recently, at London, England. This is the "golden bell" which, according to tradition, descended from heaven and was used for obtaining information when all other means failed.

On one occasion a pair of saddlebags with $1,700 was stolen, and as all inquiries were useless the priest stated he would swear all his flock on the bell on Sunday.

On the Saturday night a man came and said: "Father, there is no occasion for the golden bell—here is the money, every bit of it, all safe and sound."

While other folk get tottery in the knees and have asthma and ear-trumpets long before their time, people on the stage seem to have grasped the happy secret of perennial youth And this secret consists more in right thinking than in wearing fancy vests and high-school hats. When old Ponce de Leon put on a new pair of knee pants a few centuries ago and started for Palm Beach, Fla., where he had arranged to discover the fountain of youth, he did not understand this great secret of staying young. So he died at last without being able to conceal his real age from anybody. He should have lived now and gone into the movies.—Thrift Magazine.
